FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MiND TV Presents Democracy Now! Live Election Night Special and Day After Coverage

PHILADELPHIA (November 3, 2008) – MiND TV announces a special five-hour broadcast of Democracy Now! from 7PM to 12AM on election night 2008 (Nov. 4; Live from New York City). The following evening, MiND will also present an extended evening broadcast of Democracy Now!, 6PM-8PM (Nov.5).

“As an independent station without a news team to cover the election ourselves, we feel that it is absolutely essential to provide this programming to the viewing public,” said MiND TV CEO Howard Blumenthal. “This is an important election, and we want to keep our viewers up to date with alternative coverage.”

On election night, Democracy Now! will bring viewers the 2008 election results as they come in. The program will include live coverage of the results as the polls close, on-the-ground reports from across the country, reactions from across the globe, and running in-depth analysis and commentary from a wide range of guests that viewers won't hear from anywhere else.

And, on November 5th, Democracy Now! expands to a two-hour broadcast from 6PM to 8PM to provide complete coverage of the election outcome.
